

18 Ways To Make Magic With Pricing

Pricing is interesting in that it is objectively... objective.

But people act on emotion and not logic. Which allows you to get pretty subjective with it and create magic.

Changing how you frame your pricing (sometimes not even the price itself) can double your sales and retention. Example:

Someone requested to leave because they didn't implement the plan.

2 possible ways to frame pricing:

- a) Offer to stay for longer to give them time.
- b) Offer a second chance:

I remember on our call you mentioned you wanted to do a thousand things, but in the end, you rarely took action on what you knew. You posted zero times and didn't use my help. Sure, it's easy for me to just take the money, but there's a better option—one that will finally get you moving in one direction with a clear plan and goal.

You have the option to apply all the payments you've already made toward 2025. You've paid $4,900 so far, and I can credit that toward next year, so this time won't feel "wasted"—as if you hadn't paid anything at all. But this time, we do it right. If you commit to 2025, your weekly payment drops to $306. I'll also include a 1:1 call to map out your plan if you decide to take this option.

Let me know what you think.

The first pricing says “give me money”. And would have most likely got a no.

The second one says “let's do this right this time.” It created $9,500 on top of the other $4,900 (total of $14,400) and a relationship that wouldn't have existed otherwise.

Objective numbers. Subjective feel.

The trick to magical pricing is not to sell to a machine and think “what's the optimal pricing?”. It's like asking “what's the best pickup line?”. It doesn't work.

Instead think what do I want my prices to feel like?

That's 1 case. 17 more below:

Get Them To Buy More

Credit the last purchase into the next.

Say you have a $100, $1,000 and $10,000 product.

_____ $100

_____ $1000

_____ $10,000

Selling them as “buy this and then that”,

Is a tougher sell than selling them as “credit the last payment you made into this so it’s cheaper for you”.

This can be repeated infinitely.

Hey Sam.

You've spent a total of $200, which I can credit in two ways:

1. I can discount it from the $999 price tag and get you the Toolbox for $799 now.
2. I can get you the Toolbox now for free now and get you access to Cash Creators for 4 weeks at a discounted rate of $250/week.

This would get you access to the Toolbox for life. Plus 4 weeks of access to me with 2 weekly calls and community questions to work with me at that lower rate.

Lmk which one you prefer and I can run your card on file. Is it still the one that ends on 1009?

Test Different Pricing For Your Main Offer

Think like a Japanese. Take or add one thing to your program and market it as new.

If it works, turn it into a level of your Shell.

Retain Long Term People

"The day you sign a client is the day you start losing them." - Don Draper.

To retain long term people you enjoy working with, conserve pricing. But add depth.

Btw - this might benefit you.

I'm doing this new thing called A Call A Quarter where I'm including four hour-long calls with me to tweak and achieve your 2025 plan.

No need for upfront payments or increases in fee. Everything remains the same plus we both commit working together towards the goal for the year.

Let me know if you'd like to take me up on this and I'll get you my 1-on-1 link to schedule the next one at your convenience.

Upsells

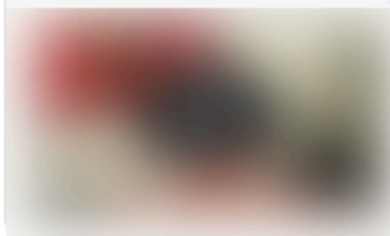

Offer upsells early.

Hey man - thought this might benefit you to shift your business to the recurring model with the 2 new offers we talked about:

I believe in playing long term games with long term people so thought about a deal with you.

I can reduce your weekly fee from $300 down to $250 if you stay for a year.

No need to pay upfront I just reduce the next payment onwards.

You end up saving $2,600 over the year.

I get some more stability.

And we both get someone we can play the long game with.

You in?

Anticipate A Low Period

People would rather avoid a loss than get a gain. You can get ahead of this objection by offering Buy X Get Y Free.

The Holidays are just around the corner.

A festive and hectic time for most of us.

And let's be honest, an expensive one too. So I figured maybe I can help.

Here's what I have for you:

Buy 2 Months, Get 1 Month Free.

I know it's a mental thing but skipping auto-charge on Christmas and New Year makes us breathe a little easier.

So if you pay for 2 months now I'll stop your weekly payments now and only resume them sometime in February.

I'm also adding a complimentary 1:1 call if you get this before DATE.

Reply "Holidays" if you're in.

JK

Good for Summer and Holidays. As well as when you know someone's taking some time off.

Sell Your Most In-Demand Checkpoint

Only sell the checkpoint with a lower timeframe and price.

<https://ckarchive.com/b/d0ueh0h4xddlgak4xx64otz4xe244al>

If it works, it can also be added as a tier of your Shell.

Get A Compulsive Yes

Add a big numerical discount.

Individually these would amount to over $3975.

With that said...

Your investment for The Wedding Toolbox makes it easy to get started with no hidden fees or subscriptions.

You can get access this minute for starting with as little as a few payments of $100.

Or you can just purchase it one-off for a $2,976 discount - and the total would be just $999.

Observation: Numbers hit harder than percentages.

Make A Big Charge Seem Small

Sometimes you sell a “bigger” thing but it can be a lot for people.

Offer to finance it weekly. Example: If it's $700, offer $100/week for 8 weeks.

Item	Quantity	Price
☒ JK's Wedding Toolbox (Upfront)	1	$999.00
☐ JK's Wedding Toolbox (Finance At $100/Week x 12 Weeks)	1	$100.00

Turn Pass Customers Into Clients

Offer to cancel their second payment:

Hey [Name]. As agreed, I'll charge your card the remaining $500 tomorrow.

An option if you'd like me not to do that:

You have the option to stay here with all your Cash Creator benefits (community, office hours and material) instead of losing them by crediting that payment to your fee.

This would mean your next $500 payment gets canceled. And you can just keep going at $250/week starting on March 7 (the current rate outside of this is $400/week. So you're getting a credit and a discount).

After 16 weeks (not before) you have the option to leave if / whenever you like

Let me know if you'd like to take me up on this and I'll cancel your next payment and talk next steps.

Rules Of Thumb

- Group Program: $100-$250/week. Raise prices at 25%, 50%, 75% and 100% capacity.
- 1-on-1: 2-3x the group program.

- Workshops: $9 to $300.
- Passes: 1x-1.25x your group program. Half now. Half at the end.

The Case For Weekly

I like weekly payments because it's subjectively easier to say yes to a weekly fee than a monthly fee.

A second benefit is that I can tailor pricing to people and the benefits are immediate. So you tend to get more yes'es:

They were all in different situations. By tailoring pricing to theirs, you can make them an offer that makes it easier to say yes.

I test pricing all the time and the question is the same: What do I want my pricing to feel like?

Objective numbers. But subjective feel.

Take one of the 18 today and send it. You might be pleasantly surprised. Then get in the habit of doing this every week and you might be constantly pleasantly surprised.
