- Don't Create. Collect.
- We overestimate what people find interesting.

- You don't need better achievements. You need better memory.

Exercise:

- The goal isn't filling the table. It's finding an idea.
- Pick.

Step 2) Desire

- Ham & Garlic: Accent example.
- There's two numbers: One and too many.
- Defining desire simplifies creation.
- Supposed to feel simple.
- Back to the Google Sheets.

Step 3) Templatize

People tell you to wrap the gift first and find the gift second:

1. Templatize
2. Desire

We find the gift first and wrap it second.

1. Desire
2. Templatize

Finding the right way to say it is about feel. Not force.

- Call To Action

How K went from losing $6,000/mo to making $100,000/mo

K was world-class at what he did. Had an offer. But was burning 6k/mo.

His offer was ok. But his delivery was scattered. Had no client journey. Everyone left after a month. And he did almost everything.

He knew he was doing something wrong. But he didn't know what.

Five lessons from his $100k/mo journey:

1) Re-define his core values, and core avatar.

Who he served, why he served them, what he did, and what his goals were.

This is the North Star.

Once you have that, you know what you're building towards.

2) Simplify his offer, shortened the time frame and raised prices

Sometimes clients put too little work because they have too much time.

When you give people too much time, they don't implement. Creating time constraints raised implementation and client success.

4) Client Tracking.

Are your clients stuck? Are they doing great? Or somewhere in the middle?

Visibility -> getting ahead of issues -> retention.

Everyone benefits from tracking. Clients get better results. You get them to stay. Win-Win.

5) Upsells

When clients were finished the program, they knew a renewal call was coming, and expected it. Be upfront about your upsells early on. And not only will they expect it - they will be curious about it.

Many renewed. Which means happier clients and MRR.

This client was unique in his implementation speed.

So don't expect the same results if you aren't willing to go. And go fast.

If you're willing to go fast,

Less Responsibility Is More Fun

JK Molina  @OneJKMolina · Oct 16

Underrated perk of money: Reduced Responsibility.

No boss. No alarm. No schedule. I don't have to be at a certain place. I only take calls on Mondays. I do whatever I want for the rest of the week.

Living intentionally. Working intensely. Resting deeply.

@OneJKMolina

My ideal business:

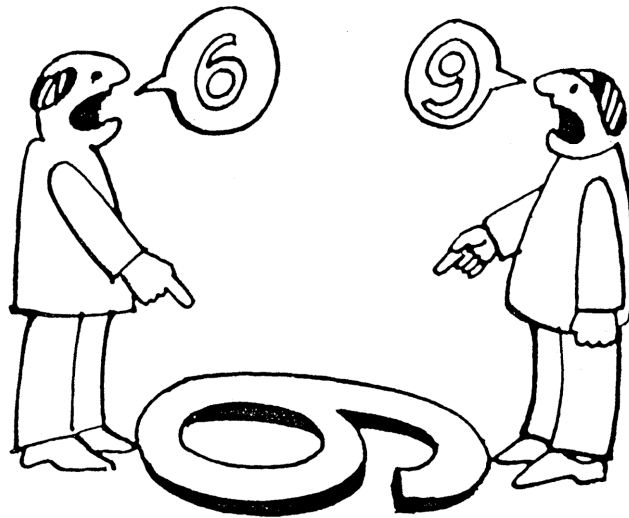

- 7 Figures
- High margins
- Doesn't need a sales call
- Can run it from anywhere
- 2-3 hours a day
- Writing 1 post a day and 1 email a day

Tomorrow I'll email you how I got there.

Cash & Cadence

- OPAD is enough
- OPAAT is enough
- Take one to $20k/month and then do something else if you want.
- Do what you can stick to.
- Funnel all to list. Then monetize in list. 100k Follower Call.

- My welcome email.
- Coming up with emails:
 - Same method of content.
 - Add an offer.
 - Get conversations going.
 - Pro tip: Email first. Social second.

Good to connect Collin.

I'm gonna shoot over all the details to you, but before I do... Can you help me help you?

I want to make sure there's nothing preventing me from getting the results you want.

Would you let me know the answer to the 3 questions below?

1. Why is now the right time for you? (What happened in your life or business that makes it important for you to get help with your growth NOW?)

2. If you were to join the community, what outcome would make you happy?

3. If the timing is right, would you be ready to get started now?

For me:

Zoomed Out:

Every Day:

- Deliver for clients
- Make an offer
- Show, Don't Tell
- Conversations
- Promote list

Zoomed In:

- Twitter: 1 Long Post + 3 Tweets/Day.
- Instagram: 1 Reel Every Other Day + 1 Post / Day + 3 Stories / Day (VA)
- YouTube: 1 Video A Week + 1 Pod A Week
- LinkedIn: 2 Posts / Day
- Email: 1 / Day

Common Mistakes

- Not collecting: Makes it harder than it needs to be.
- Not defining: Confuses people. And confused minds don't buy.
- Not showing. Doesn't give people a reason to buy from you.
- Tactics. Not Strategy. (You want to make people feel. Not do.)

Tactic:

Strategy:

K was world-class at what he did. Had an offer. But was burning 6k/mo.

His offer was ok. But his delivery was scattered. Had no client journey. Everyone left after a month. And he did almost everything.

He knew he was doing something wrong. But he didn't know what.

Five lessons from his $100k/mo journey:

1) Re-define his core values, and core avatar.

Who he served, why he served them, what he did, and what his goals were.

This is the North Star.

Once you have that, you know what you're building towards.

2) Simplify his offer, shortened the time frame and raised prices

Sometimes clients put too little work because they have too much time.

When you give people too much time, they don't implement. Creating time constraints raised implementation and client success.

- Writing For The Wrong Person.

... But you want the 1 hour recording? Just doesn't make sense. Especially since you travel and obviously have limited time.

Being real with you: I remember you said you wanted to join the program.

I don't think it's a good idea.

Especially if you're not going to take action. The program requires you to do. And if you're not going to do then you won't get results.

So I'll just give you the price.

- Writing to the wrong person is draining.
- Writing to more than one person is overwhelming.
- I write for John. Who do you write for?
